(HIMSELF)

"Hello folks"

ISN'T IT STRANGE?—IT SURELY IS—Coffey, Rabedeaux and doctors are stranger—no one knows how strange it is better than Clyde Rabedeaux, publisher of Muscatine's "second paper," Mr. Coffey, editor of WELLMAN ADVANCE, who seemed not capable of writing that editorial, because he says, "By a Staff Member,"—and the doctors who possibly influenced Coffey to print "a sympathetic appeal" for their profession—anyone who read the article in the Wellman Advance or Muscatine's SECOND PAPER—can see the "ear marks" of the SAME OLD GANG—what a humiliation it must have been to Mr. Coffey to HAVE TO GET someone else to write his editorial—a "staff member"—Coffey knew he had to put it by a "staff member" because all of his readers KNOW HIS STYLE of writing—and the editorial in question was far above HIS ABILITY—the big laugh was when the Journal said they were reprinting it because it was "A REMARKABLE PIECE OF WRITING"—not "WITH A VIEW TO ATTACKING ANYBODY"—which looks as though the editorial staff of the SECOND PAPER believes all their readers are UNINTELLIGENT and swallow all the bunk they print—yes, just pure UNADULTERATED BUNK—if it had not been for the fact that the few bona fide paid readers Muscatine's SECOND PAPER really has—not counting those they agreed "to let ride"—having listed subscribers about the Baker Hospital alleged former patients—naming people who had never seen the inside of the Baker Hospital—and if they had not been about Sam and Henry dying somewhere—hundreds of miles from Muscatine—and then published them as news—then perhaps the citizens of Muscatine REALLY WOULD BELIEVE they published that editorial because IT WAS GOOD—adler and his "MAN FRIDAY," Rabedeaux—were just a little dissatisfied because benchmen went down the streets of Muscatine saying that the Free Press would never be printed—never last long—the machinery was no good—we had no subscribers—and now have to meet the SAME PEOPLE and SWALLOW THEIR LIES—the same kind of LIES they published when they fought the PEOPLE against the CITY'S LIGHT PLANT—River Park—Water works—street car fares—gas franchise—and what not—could anyone read that editorial and not read between the lines—that it was a big effort—through sympathy with the doctors—to counteract the TRUTHS that I, a been TELLING about ORGANIZED MEDICS—not the single FAMILY DOCTOR am I fighting—but those who have organized to COMMERCIALIZE ON HUMAN SOULS—such as some of the cases of our local hospitals where operations have been done—FOR HUNDREDS OF DOLLARS—when same were NOT NECESSARY or of operations performed for that which DID NOT EXIST—or for operations suggested for REMOVAL OF APPENDIX—when the little appendix had already BEEN REMOVED—or of one Muscatine doctor who told a woman she had acute appendicitis and must be RUSHED TO HOSPITAL FOR AN OPERATION—but changed his mind when she told him—WHY DOCTOR YOU REMOVED MY APPENDIX YEARS AGO—I have opposed these FOOLISH THINGS—and saved the public thousands of dollars—by being honest and courageous in my broadcastings and many of those who heard and heeded have saved themselves hundreds of USELESS OPERATIONS—hundreds coming to the BAKER HOSPITAL where major operations are NOT PERFORMED—nor is radium used—nor the deadly x-rays—it is these things that hurt—and knowing that chiropractic osteopathy and drugless healing have come to the fore through SHEER NECESSITY because the ALLOPATHS could NOT CURE and another—MORE NATURAL METHOD—was needed—instead of the poison pus as a preventive—the STRANGEST THING is that no specific case I have mentioned has been CONTRADICTION—if the TRUTH were known about the RING and FEE SPLITTING

POLITICAL REVOLT LOOMS IN WEST

Legion Told Beer Would Aid Jobless

ISSUE TOSSED INTO LAPS OF VETS' PARLEY

Labor Speaker Urges Manufacture of Beer For Unemployed

WASHINGTON—(INS)—The prohibition issue was tossed unexpectedly into the lap of the American Legion unemployment conference today, when a spokesman for the American Federation of Labor declared the legalization of beer would do more to relieve unemployment this winter than all other relief measures combined.

M. J. McDonough, president of the building and trades department of the federation, made the suggestion after representatives of capital and industry endorsed unemployment insurance, condemned the dole and suggested that each locality "look after its own" unemployed next winter.

McDonough declared that all measures suggested thus far would put few men to work, but that the legalization of beer would furnish jobs to 1,000,000 to 1,250,000 men and women within five months.

PROGRESSIVE REPUBLICANS GIVE OPINION

Say Only Progressive Candidate Can Win For Republicans

By GEORGE E. HOLMES
WASHINGTON—(INS)—A political revolt of far-reaching proportions is fomenting out where the West begins, and if the Republican party proceeds with the renomination of President Hoover next year it is going to find the going extremely rough.

The warning prediction was sounded in Washington today by two of the Republican progressives of the senate, Senator Frazier of North Dakota, and Senator Brookhart of Iowa, who have just returned to the capital from several months of contacting with "home folks."

Wheat at 30c

With millions of unemployed facing the spectre of a hard winter, with wheat selling at 30 cents a bushel and other farm commodities at the lowest ebb in many years, the times, they asserted call for new leadership. And the party that supplies it, they intimated is the party that is going to be successful between the Alleghenies and the Rockies in the next campaign.

"There is certainly going to be an ample vote of protest against the Republican party next year if conditions continue as they are," said Frazier. "Naturally the farmers of the northwest are blaming the administration for conditions. Naturally the president has lost popularity. There was a gigantic protest vote last year, when more new senators and representatives were elected than ever before, and it will be even larger next year because conditions undeniably are worse."

Want Real Progressive

Asked the direct question whether "any Republican can carry the West next year," Frazier replied: "Out in the middle west and northwest, the nomination of a real

Mysterious 'Pirate' Murder Baffles Police

Wife of Rich Yacht Owner Fails to Change Story

MINEOLA, N. Y.—(INS)—Checking and re-checking the amazing story of pretty Mrs. Lillian Collings that two "pirates" murdered her husband, Benjamin P. Collings, by binding him and tossing him overboard from his yacht in the dead of night, police officials admitted today that the case, with all its fantastic complexities, had them completely baffled.

Out of the maze of theories and conjecture the following facts stand out:

1.—Mrs. Collings has not deviated from her story despite repeated and intensive questioning.

2.—Collings' body has not been found.

3.—No trace of the two men who committed the alleged murder has been found.

4.—The police have failed to dig up a motive for the murder—if, indeed, a murder has occurred.

5.—No arrests have been made and none seemed imminent today.

Inspector Gives Views

The young wife's story—she is twenty-eight and attractive—of how her husband was done away with was characterized by police inspector Harold King as "The most astounding narrative of human behavior" he has ever heard.

Grimly, the police are proceeding with the investigation of numerous clues. They were studying, for one thing, the handwriting of the missing man, and comparing it with a registration of "F. E. Collingsbourne and wife" at the Hotel Charles in Springfield, Mass., last year. The authorities had been furnished with photostatic copies of the "Collingsbourne" signature. They said that, from a superficial examination, the registration did not appear to be in Collings' handwriting, but they intended to submit it to experts.

Piracy Story Told

The most amazing feature of the case is the weird story told by Mrs. Collings of the piracy and abduction. And when the young wife, or widow, was informed by the authorities that her recital was unusually strange, she calmly replied: "I know it sounds almost fishy, but I know also that it is the truth."

The police stress the fact that Mrs. Collings is not under surveillance and that she has voluntarily given them any information they sought. She has not been in custody at any time.

COUNCIL BLUFFS BLAZE IS PROBED

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia.—(INS)—Fire officials here are unable today to discover the origin of a blaze which Sunday destroyed the Chicago, Northwestern and Great Northern houses here with damages of $20,000.

Fire companies from Omaha and Council Bluffs fought fire all afternoon before they prevented it from spreading to three large grain elevators nearby. Five firemen were slightly burned during the blaze.

IOWAN IS HELD IN LIQUOR CASE

WATERLOO, Ia.—(INS)—Harold Coffin of Waterloo, being held in Black Hawk county jail here today on a charge of illegal sale of intoxicating liquor.

Coffin, who is alleged to have sold a half pint of alcohol to a federal prohibition agent was unable to post the $500 bond named by authorities.

350 Bodies Burned on Funeral Pyre to Avoid Disease

BELEZE, British Honduras—(INS)—With the death toll in the hurricane which leveled a large section of British Honduras, standing at approximately 1,200, arrival of United States navy and marine corps planes with medical supplies and bandages was anxiously awaited by relief workers today.

Large supplies brought by the planes thus far sent to Belize were exhausted and authorities dispatched a new appeal for outside aid.

To the fear of epidemics was added the new menace of fire, as blazes broke out in the debris of wrecked homes and buildings and threatened to spread through large sections of the city.

General opinion among United States marines, who were taking an active part in rescue, relief and police work, was that the toll of dead might increase to 1,500.

Throughout the day, the flames from vast funeral pyres reached upward toward the sky. It was estimated that approximately 350 bodies had been burned because of lack of immediate burial space and this number was expected to increase as more victims were found in the tangled wreckage of what once was one of Central America's most picturesque cities.

In addition, some 700 victims were buried in cemeteries and in hastily dug trenches on the outskirts of the city. Officials believed that cremation of the victims had dispelled the threat of pestilence, but urgent need still remained for medical supplies and disinfectants.

2 IOWA WOMEN HURT IN CRASH

MARSHALLTOWN, Ia.—(INS)—Mrs. Delbert Hilsbeck of Ferguson and her daughter, Ellis, are in a hospital here today recovering from injuries they received in an automobile accident Sunday night. Three other children suffered minor injuries in the accident which occurred on the city bridge here.

Three Aviators Take Off On Portugal-New York Hop

LIBSON—(INS)—News of the progress of Italy Rody, Christian Johansson and Fernando Costa Vieira on their attempted non-stop flight from Portugal to New York was eagerly awaited here today.

National interest in the daring venture was heightened when Rody and Johansson, youthful German fliers who came here from Berlin several weeks ago, revealed at the last moment that "Vieja," a well-known Portuguese pilot, would accompany them on the journey.

The flight got under way at 9:30 a. m. yesterday (5:30 a. m. E. D. T.) from an improvised air field at the town of Sol. The take-off was believed to be the least heralded of any attempted non-stop crossing of the Atlantic since Col. Charles A. Lindbergh started from New York to Paris in his historic journey.

The three fliers arrived at the field shortly after 6:30 a. m., and spent some time inspecting the plane. They supervised the fueling of the plane's huge gasoline tanks, and the unusual activity at the usually vacant field on the left bank of the Tagus river, about 30 miles from Lisbon, attracted a considerable crowd of spectators.

SEYMOUR, Ia.—(INS)—Femoral surgery was being held today for Robert Johnson who was instantly killed Sunday morning when his car collided with another a mile north of Seymour.

Three others, riding in the car with Johnson, were seriously injured and taken to the St. Joseph hospital in Cedar Rapids. They were: Elmer Johnson, fractured skull and internal injuries, Roscoe Johnson, cuts and bruises, and Cecilia Perry, of Numa, broken legs and serious cuts.

Legislators Are Sued For Return of $500 Expense Money

CARROLL, Ia.—(INS)—Attorneys representing Brown McCrory of Carroll in his suit against 128 members of the 43rd Iowa General Assembly have received notification from Carl W. Sess of Sioux City and Frank J. Sannson of Akron, two of the defendants that they desire to stand trial immediately.

McCrory is suing the legislators for return of $500 expense funds they secured under an act passed by the 43rd General Assembly which authorized the payment to members of funds for expenses while attending the session.

He states in his petition that the act is unconstitutional.

Sannson and Sess notified the attorneys they said, that they will waive any venue change and have no objection to the case being heard in Polk county. It was formerly announced that each of the defendants would demand a separate trial to be heard in the home communities.

MAN CONFESSES IOWA ROBBERY

Admits He Engineered Looting of Halbut Postoffice

OMAHA, Ia.—(INS)—Albert J. Toker, 19, who says his home is in Kansas City admitted here today that he engineered the robbery of the Halbut, Ia., postoffice, August 29, in which he and two companions escaped with $12,000 in cash and stamps.

Toker was captured when he escorted T. F. Mooney, postal inspector of Fort Dodge, Ia., on the street here Sunday and asked him for a dime to get a cup of coffee. Mooney was in Omaha searching for Toker and recognizing the fugitive offered to buy Toker and his companion, James Morgan of Cleveland, Ohio, a cup of coffee.

After reaching a restaurant with the men Mooney called police.

Toker said Morgan had nothing to do with the robbery. He admitted serving prison sentences at Jefferson City and St. Joseph, Mo.

CONVICTS BEAT 2 PEN GUARDS

Three Mutinous Men Put in Solitary Confinement

JOLIET, Ill.—(INS)—Two guards at Stateville penitentiary today were recovering from severe beatings given them Sunday by three mutinous men. The three were guard Capt. Taylor Davis and George Davis, a keeper.

The pair had gone to the convicts' cell and ordered them out on a special work detail. The convicts were defiant. Before aid could arrive, the guards were severely beaten. The captain suffered a broken arm and probably skull fracture and the keeper a broken nose and jaw.

The convicts were placed in solitary confinement.

Prison authorities blamed the outbreak to the visit Saturday of the legislative committee. They declared the prisoners were usually restless after visits of that kind.

Aimee Semple McPherson Takes Airplane For Elopement With Young Choir Singer

LOS ANGELES—(INS)—Aimee Semple McPherson, the famous evangelist, calmly resumed her evangelistic duties today following her swift, spectacular "elopement" with David L. Hutton, baritone singer of Angelus Temple.

"We are happy and anxious to get back to work," the attractive feminine evangelist said as she prepared to launch a new preaching campaign in Portland, Ore.

Meanwhile, her thousands of followers evidenced open amazement at their 38-year-old leader's sudden and secret airplane dash early Sunday to the desert town of Yuma, Ariz., where she was married to the 30-year-old singer.

The ceremony, rigidly simple, was performed in the narrow passageway of a triple-motored passenger airplane at the Yuma airport. Immediately after the brief wedding Aimee explained: "This is our honeymoon express—let's go."

She and her bridegroom and the small party accompanying them took their seats in the cabin of the ship and the plane roared westward. The entire proceedings, including the issuance of a marriage certificate, occupied less than an hour.

Upon her return to Los Angeles the noted evangelist explained that the "elopement" was deemed necessary after it was discovered that a "leak" had developed in her secret plans for her marriage to Hutton. She also said that she and Hutton are scheduled to conduct a revival meeting at Ventura tonight and they wanted to be married before the meeting.

Gandhi Attends Meet To Discuss Problem Of Countrymen

LONDON—(INS)—The round table conference on India, assembled to formulate a new federal constitution for Britain's teeming peninsula, re-opened in the golden throne room of St. James' palace here today.

Mahatma M. K. Gandhi, leader of the Indian nationalists, was one of the last arrivals. He appeared on the scene ten minutes after the meeting had gotten under way. Attired in his traditional costume of loin cloth and shawl, Gandhi drove to the ancient palace from his modest temporary headquarters in Kingsley Hall, Bow, in an automobile.

'SECRET SIX' FIGHTS CRIME

Chicago Man Lauds Group for Its Good Work

CHICAGO—(INS)—The "Secret Six," which suggests so much drama in crime fighting that it inspired a movie, was today pictured as a far-reaching, double-edged weapon against minions of the underworld.

Col. Robert I. Randolph, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, issued a statement asserting the secret organization "clears the way" for all major gang prosecutions in the last year.

Besides combating the mobsters, the group has fought all types of crime that prey on legitimate business, Col. Randolph said.

Al Capone's prosecution was aided by the "secret six," according to the trade association head. The committee also had a hand in 50 other prosecutions or convictions and at present is conducting 55 separate investigations, Col. Randolph stated.

It was indicated that the "secret six" serves the community chiefly by digging up cases of criminality and turning them over to the proper authorities for further investigation.

"Many of those who have been following our cooperation with the federal authorities in the prosecution of the Capone crowd seem ignorant of the fact that we are interested in combating any crime that affects business," Col. Randolph's statement said.

As We See It

Keep Children In School

A nation-wide movement has been launched to keep the children in school until they have reached at least the age of 16 years. The movement is expected to accomplish more than merely securing additional education for the children, although this in itself would be a sufficient reason for supporting the program wholeheartedly.

President Green of the American Federation of Labor spoke extensively on the subject over the radio and stated the case for keeping the children in school so completely that we take the liberty of recalling his words to your mind, if you heard them, or of presenting them to you in print in case you did not hear the address.

"There are over 5,000,000 persons walking the streets looking for jobs," Mr. Green said. "There are approximately 5,000,000 more working part time. What stronger or more convincing argument can be offered why any boy or girl under 16, having been given gainful employment, should now be sent to school and the work they have been doing be performed by adults?"

There you have the other object of the movement to get the children back to school. The reasoning is sound. There is no economic gain in replacing adults with children in the factories of the nation but, as everyone knows, there are thousands and thousands of children under 16 years of age who are filling jobs that adults need.

As President Green also said later in his talk, we have permitted children to leave school and secure jobs to help out when the head of the family has been unable to find employment. In doing this, the state has been guilty of connivance. Laws can and should be passed which will keep children in school until they have at least completed a high school education, even though the expense is borne by the state.

There are many millions more children in school today than there were a decade or so ago. In almost every city where there is a high school, additional facilities have had to be added constantly and it is to be hoped that the movement launched at Washington will result in keeping many thousands or perhaps millions more in school.

Too often the value of a high school education is overlooked by both the parents and the children. Parents in moderate circumstances are sometimes too willing to listen when their growing children desire to quit short of finishing high school. It is a heavy burden for many to keep their children in school until the higher course has been completed, but it is worth it.

Children, reaching the age where they begin to enjoy spending a bit more money than the ordinary parents can provide, are prone to envy those who are making their own living, little thinking that they are usually placing a definite limit on their income when they quit before graduation from high school.

There are many specious arguments advanced against the type of education offered in the high schools. It is easy to argue that a knowledge of Latin or algebra or elementary chemistry will not prove valuable to a person who does not intend to follow a profession, but the arguments are not sound.

Few children, and all too few parents, realize that the greatest benefits to be derived from a high school education are the ability to think in a straight line and to enjoy the finer things of life. The mental exercise necessary to master high school Latin, algebra and other seemingly unnecessary courses provides just the right kind of training to enable the student to learn to think.

Many of our biggest business men have been great successes in spite of a lack of education, but who can tell what great success would have attended their efforts in the business world had they been permitted to continue their studies?

The movement to keep children under 18 years of age at their studies is a worthy one. It has the support of capital and it has the support of labor.

It should have the support of the great mass of people who do not fall into the category of capital or that of labor.

No child, speaking now of the ordinary child, of course, can hope to compete successfully in business with one who has been trained properly. The present is demonstrating that it takes a lot more to make good than it did when some of the country's financial giants were amassing fortunes.

High school is worth while. Keep the youngsters there.

Speaking Of Business Giants

Sometimes of late we have felt there was something missing in the daily papers and magazines of the country, something which we were accustomed to find and which is now lacking. For awhile we were unable to determine just what it was. Now we know.

What has become of the business giants who were wont to tell us in glowing terms just how they made their great successes? What has become of these marvelous executives who patronizingly instructed the young idea to direct its attention to them and emulate their examples?

Perhaps you too have been wondering where these business marvels are that they do not exercise some of their genius to put this country back on its feet—and we don't mean through holes in the bottom of its shoes.

Somewhat or other, we have often had a hunch that a lot of these big success stories were a lot of baloney. We have often wondered if the marvelous success of some of these $100,000 a year chaps wasn't due in a little measure to luck and good times rather than to some super-human sort of genius which brought order out of chaos and made two dollars bloom where a lowly quarter had hitherto blossomed.

Once in a very great while, when we are in the proper mood to look askance at some of the things as they are, the thought has persisted that many industries pay a lot too much for management and not quite enough for just plain everyday work.

Perhaps this is what some of our "radical" friends mean when they insist that the profits of toil are not as evenly distributed as they might be in this busy country. It requires a lot more brains, perhaps, to sit at a beautifully carved, glass topped desk and operate the business end of an industry, but it is quite important, also, to have skilled workers producing the goods which the high powered boy in the private office exercises his high salaried brains to sell.

Oh, well, little thoughts like that are perhaps not just the thing on a bright September day, but we do wish some of these industrial wizards, who tell their interesting stories of success so romantically in the magazines, would stir up the old gray cells and get things going in the country again.

Our Platform for the People Is:

1. Less taxation.
2. Fewer State Commissions.
3. Universal school books.
4. Lower freight rates.
5. Return of river transportation.
6. A cleanup of some state institutions.
7. More efficiency in public offices.

The Evening Story

BY WHISKERS

Phyllis liked her job with the Kidder-Aiken company for several reasons, but chiefly because it was located on the avenue and near enough to the park to allow for a short walk every noon after lunch down the shady winding paths.

Phyllis was a country-bred girl and her heart was starved in the hurry and bustle of the city for a breath of dust-free air and the peace and solitude of a shady woodland dell. The park afforded this. And one even saw squirrels and birds, too, there, and after a brief half-hour spent wandering around the quiet paths she returned to Kidder Aiken's with a lighter heart and a new zest for work.

Where most girls lived from one day to the next on the expectation of seeing the "boy friend," Phyllis counted hours by their nearness or distance from this daily walk. It was in September that she first made the acquaintance of Whiskers. If one can call friendliness to a squirrel acquaintance. And such a funny whisker, little chap he was too! Not fat and sleek and prosperous looking like all the other respectable looking squirrels in the park, but, oh, so scrawny and with a hungry looking and very rough coat, instead of sleek and shining, and harried and worried and nervous and frightened and though every breath he drew, caused him fright and worry.

Small wonder that Phyll's heart warmed up to the little chap and that she walked back four blocks to a peanut vender and was twenty minutes late as the result of feeding him that noon when she heard him might be sure he got the nuts. And the next day she spent some of her lunch money for a luscious apple for the little squirrel, and it was as she watched him eat the apple in nervous, greedy, half-starved gulps that the nickname occurred to her. He was just all whiskers, that was what—and forthwith the ancient little beggar was christened.

An unusually warm spell in October sent crowds of eager nature lovers to the park and Phyllis had about given up the hope of feeding him that noon when she heard his shrill, eager chattering and, stooping eagerly she held out a handful of shelled walnuts and called softly to him as he jumped nervously about on the lower trunk of a big oak.

"Hurry, Whiskers, I must run. Come and get your lunch, you dear silly little imp, you," she half scolded and then a lean brown hand became visible around the other side of the tree, and peering stealthily, Phyll discovered a very good-looking young man holding forth a slice of apple to the squirrel which was torn between the temptation of Phyll's walnuts and the maddeningly fragrant slice of apple. Laughing helplessly, the girl placed the nut meats on the ground and turned swiftly away toward the avenue gate of the park and ten minutes later she was smiling softly to herself as she removed her coat in the offices of the Kidder, Aiken company.

At 6 the offices were deserted and Phyll hurried furiously to finish her reports in order to catch the 6:20, when a faint chattering noise outside her window caused her heart to almost stop beating. She was tired. To fancy she heard Whiskers chattering nervously away up in the fourth story of Kidder Aiken's! Why, there were three street crossings between there and the park!

Warily Phyllis, pushed a strand of damp blond hair from her eyes and, sighing softly, attacked the report again vigorously, when again the faint sound intruded and conscious that her hands shook slightly, the girl went to the window and, drawing the shade up, leaning out to look out and locate the strange noise, which so much resembled Whiskers' high chattering.

A wide stone ledge ran around each story of the building, possibly four inches wide, and along this in the dim light from the street lamps below Phyllis made out the tiny shape of gray that was Whiskers, felt her heart stop beating as the terrified chattering whimper came again to her ears.

A startled sob caught at her throat, and she was unconsciously ringing her hands, as she thought desperately of all the ways in which firemen rescued people and realized with a sick heart that they would be useless here, for Whiskers was not a person and she had no fireman's equipment, either.

Then a voice, cheery and masculine and reassuring, cut through the silence.

"Get those three window poles from the closet, Miss Hanaford, and bring them up here to my office—quick!" and a few seconds later the girl pushed open the door to the sales manager's office on the floor above and ran to the window with the three long poles used for lowering or closing the high windows.

"Stand here," the young man said, and Phyll thrilled with the knowledge that he was the young man of the park incident, "and as I see you keep him from getting rattled while I fasten these together," and Phyll leaned far out the window and talked and coaxed the terrified little animal, hoping against hope that he wouldn't try to run around the ledge, smash against the gray stone finish at the corner and fall the four sickening stories to the cement below. Stars were beginning to peek through the October evening sky; a faint luminous light foretold the moon rising far to the east, and then a reassuring voice at her elbow, saying softly, "This will do it, I think. Keep calling him, Miss Hanaford. He knows your voice."

It might have been seconds or hours that they stood there, the girl cheerfully calling the frightened squirrel, the man patiently holding the pole against the ledge of stone for the tiny animal to walk along. Finally he moved; came cautiously to the pole and sniffed and chattered shrilly and tested with a speculative front paw; still the girl coaxed and suddenly with a shrill little gasping yelp the squirrel dashed fleetly along the pole and the next instant was up on the coat collar of the nice young man and Phyll turned to gasp at recognition. It wasn't the sales manager, even if he was in the latter's office. He was none other than Conrad Aiken himself. And he grinned boyishly as he pulled the other half of the apple from his pocket and held it up for Whiskers to nibble. Together they walked back through the dusk to place Whiskers in his own element again and then they walked on to a quiet little restaurant, each grateful to Whiskers for bringing them together.

Just Kiddies

PETER CONTINUES TO BE PATIENT

Patience is a virtue possessed by very few. I try to cultivate it and so, I hope, will you.

Peter Rabbit was cultivating it. To cultivate anything is to make it grow. Peter is naturally impatient when his curiosity is aroused, and so he was finding it very hard work to cultivate patience when he wanted so much to find out where Rattles the Kingfisher had made his home. But he was beginning to suspect that just as the longest way round is sometimes the shortest way to a given place, so the practice of patience is sometimes the quickest way of finding out a thing you want to know. So now as he lay in the long grass on the bank of the Laughing Brook a little way below the Smiling Pool watching Rattles pass up and down just above the water he felt sure that he was doing the wisest thing.

When Rattles flew down the Laughing Brook he always had a minnow or a tiny trout in his big spear-like bill. When he flew past toward the Smiling Pool he carried nothing. "Just as sure as Jennie's nose," Peter thought, "he takes those little fish home to his babies, and that means that his home is down the Laughing Brook, some place near the Smiling Pool. 'Til go a little farther down and watch again." So Peter did. This time it was not nearly so long after Rattles disappeared with a fish than long time, he past on his way back to the Smiling Pool. "That means that I am getting nearer," thought Peter. "It can't be very far from here. 'Til wait a little farther and see what he does." So Peter waited until Rattles the Kingfisher had gone back to the Smiling Pool, and then scampered along down the bank of the Laughing Brook. "This time he went farther than before, and once more he waited and waited, but not a glimpse of Rattles did he get, although now and then he heard his harsh rattle farther up the Laughing Brook. After he had waited a long, long time, or at least what seemed to him a long time, he thought of something. It must be that he had passed the home of Rattles without knowing it. He had come too far. Yes, sir, that must be the reason that he no longer saw Rattles the Kingfisher coming and going. That home must be somewhere between the place where he had last hidden and the place where he was then hiding.

Once more Peter decided to change his hiding place. He poked his head out over the edge of the bank and looked up the Laughing Brook. A little way above was a bend in the Laughing Brook which shut off the view. From just beyond that came the sound of the unmusical voice of Rattles the Kingfisher. "I'll hide just where I can see around that bend and see what I shall see."

Now all this time Peter hadn't once thought of how near he was to spying on a neighbor in this way. He was just trying to satisfy his curiosity. He didn't once think that it was not the way one Quaddy should treat another Quaddy. So his conscience, which you know is that small voice inside, didn't bother him a bit as he hurried over to his new hiding place. There he was, up to the ears in the grass, and almost the first thing he noticed was a big sandy bank on the other side. But Peter had seen big sandy banks before, and he didn't think anything about this one. Then he saw Billy Mink swimming up the Laughing Brook. He was tempted to call Billy but decided not to. It would be fun to watch Billy and see what he was up to. So Peter held his tongue and used his eyes instead.

Billy Mink seemed to be looking for something. As he swam along he kept watching the banks of the Laughing Brook, first one and then the other. Where the water was deep he swam, but where it was shallow he ran swiftly over the rocks or along the shore, every few steps stopping to look and to sniff. It was very clear that Billy was hunting for something. Suddenly a harsh rattle sounded from the direction of the Smiling Pools. Rattles the Kingfisher was coming. For a moment Peter forgot Billy Mink. When he thought of him again Billy had disappeared. "You know Billy Mink can disappear the quick-

PEOPLES PULPIT.

It may be all well and good for the common every day laborer to get such little wages, but it makes the rich folks richer by the poor people laboring for such little pay, struggling and skimping to get by, which is almost impossible today. The majority of the rich folks have several houses to rent, usually, and of course they don't forget to charge from $30 to $35, which is nearly a laboring man's monthly pay.

There can be a family by their eats and clothing, which is a necessity. If they can't pay the rent, the house can stand vacant before the owner will let it, and the renter can afford to pay with such wages. The married women are a lot to fault for the men getting such little pay. The men in the button factories, cash and door factories, etc., carry home a little check of $8 to $10 a week to pay his rent, buy his food, fuel and clothing for a family of three to six or seven, and maybe more! How can he do it? The married women go wild, want to be independent and have their own spending money, so to the factory they go, leaving the children, running in the streets; who need a mother's care above all things. Some women and mothers do not care for home just so they can have spending money for unnecessary luxury and the women will work for less than what the men would so the manufacturers think, "Well, we'll give fair wages, and we can cut the men's wages. The married women are keeping single girls from getting work most anywhere in the city. I think that when a girl is working in the factory or at any other employment and she gets married, that should be the end of her employment and give another girl a chance who has qualified herself for work. There is only one condition on which married women should be allowed to work in factories—if the husband is disabled or if she is left a widow, she would almost have to work to support herself and family. Then the men would be getting as much pay today as man and wife together. I believe this is the foundation of divorces. I have mentioned the women in factories. Now I am going to say that girls who are school teachers prior to their marriages, should not be hired for teachers again unless in case death has taken the husband and she has to support her household. Also another instance, school teachers who have taught for years and years, are so advanced in age they are not qualified for the place any longer. They should be a limited number of years for a teacher to teach and then let younger ones teach who have gone to school and qualified themselves for teaching. Since qualifying for teaching here, the young women sit waiting a chance to get to be teachers. If the married factory women and the married school teachers were home attending their household duties there would be less men and single girls idle and our men would be bringing pay enough home to keep their families and run a laboring man's wife with children.

Good Health Club

"THE STARTING POINT"

About two months ago, a great deal of really valuable information was given in this column regarding or relating to foods and their actions when used by the body. Since then we have had articles relating to the various functions of the body, the organs, and even the dangers of vaccination have been explained to you. All of these writings have taken time and serious thought because it is up to you readers to say what your health shall be. Your body is your own to do as you choose with, and you are responsible for its well-being. There is always some pain or ache for which a doctor can treat and prescribe for. We don't need so much medicine any more than we need so many hospitals. But it is up to you, individually, to take such good care of yourself that you will not be one of the ones that help fill these hospital beds and empty so many bottles and pill boxes.

All of these conditions bring us right back to the starting point again and again. You are the one who loses out and must go back and start over every time you fall out because you are sick and ailing. You are the one who is with your body day and night, every second, until it falls to pieces. What is the sense of living in a broken-down dilapidated house for years and years, and then, when you think and care, keep your house in just as good condition as you do your car, your fishing tackle, your farm machinery, your clothes, and so on? Every time you have a break-down, you are left behind the rock. Sometimes a kindly friend will give you a lift and you get another start, go along for a while, and then down you go again.

It all leads us right back to the beginning again, and at the beginning of the race you have to have the necessary fuel with which you generate your energy. Consequently, eating is one of the biggest factors in your life. You must eat to live. Just as you enrich and cultivate your mental and spiritual self by right thinking, just so you must use good food, richly combined, to supply the materials from which the various tissues of the body repair themselves.

As has been stated before, different kinds of foods are suitable for different purposes and you cannot get as good results when you put all of these different kinds into your stomach at the same meal.

It is not wise to mix starches and acids together, nor starches and proteins. There are some acids which are better eaten alone as they need undivided attention during their digestion, otherwise, serious results may ensue.

Starches such as bread, potatoes, cereals, these require digestion by mastication in the mouth where the food may come in contact with ptyalin in the saliva. These foods should not be bolted down in unmasticated lumps to ferment and sour in the stomach. Starches need this alkali substance (ptyalin) for their digestion and it must Proteins, such as meats, including fowl, fish, cheese, nuts, etc., require an acid medium which is supplied by the stomach cells.

When these two different kinds of food are eaten together the same condition is brought about as one finds in a laboratory when an acid and an alkali are put together, namely, they neutralize each other, consequently, neither one can be properly digested. What is the result? The system gets a sour, fermented mass of food with which it must use to repair broken-down tissues. How can the body be kept clean and the blood stream sweet, under such conditions?

THE KING AND QUEEN CUT "SALARIES"

"King George has cut $250,000 from his civil list income in order to help relieve the strain on the British treasury."—News Item.

King George—Everybody's cutting salaries and it would be a splendid gesture if we did something of the sort, don't you think?

Queen Mary—I suppose we could manage to worry along on a little less, George dear. What are we getting now, anyhow?

King—I haven't the figures handy but it's something like $70,000 pounds from the civil list, and then there's what the Duke of Lancaster chips in each year.

Queen—It seems like a lot of money, but we never have anything at the end of the year.

King—It all goes for upkeep. We get good money for being king and queen but look at what we have to pay out to run the jobs. We have a pay-roll like a circus. Just how many servants have we in our employ at present?

Queen—(trying to figure)—I'd have to look at the books but it's something like four thousand.

King—Does that include footmen, equeries and first-class stablemen?

Queen—Oh, no. It's quite exclusive of footmen. I've never had time to count the footmen.

King—The place is cluttered up with help but there'd be a frightful howl if we hired even a few dozen butlers. We'll have to economize some other way. What would you suggest, dear?

Queen—We could save heaps of money if we could only abandon some of those ceremonials and parades.

King—Now you're shouting, Mary. Life with us seems a round of parades, receptions and morbid services. I'm sick of 'em. We ought to cut 'em out.

Queen—But how? You forget it's all a tradition. The people expect it of us.

King—(dejectedly)—Sometimes I wish we could lock the doors of Buckingham Palace and not answer the doorbells. England has too many anniversaries that have to be commemorated by ceremonials and parades. I often wish the country could forget it's glorious past. It's always celebrating a sea fight or something. And that sort of thing costs money.

Queen—Why, George Hanover! How you talk!

King—Well, I mean it. We ought to retrench on that sort of thing until the depression is over.

Queen—We'll just have to economize on general running expenses, that's all. You'll have to help. You can give up a few grouse hunts.

King—Of course, my dear. Of course.

Queen—Oh, you'll say you'll help but you'll be blowing in a load of money on those yachts of yours. The bills for varnish, white paint, putty and new anchor lines this year were frightful. And you spent an awful lot repairing leaks.

King—Now don't rub it in on what I spend on boats. Look at all the money you spend for parasols! Queen—I used 3000 fewer parasols last year than in 1929. I think you're awful to twist me on little things like parasols.

King—Now, Mary, don't fly off the handle. I'm sorry. All I'm saying is that we'll both have to trim in our sails a bit. We can do it in lots of ways. We can buy a cheaper grade of harness used in imperial processions, cut down on horse feed a little, let the old screens in the palace get another year, use a less expensive metal polish on the crowns, and tell the cooks to use fewer plums in plum puddings. Every little bit will help.

Queen—You can even get along without buying any new hats this winter. Queen (sternly)—Now George, not another word about my hats!

HIS MISTAKE The Nautlius has definitely abandoned that proposed trip to the North Pole, Commander Wilkins now being willing to admit that it's the wrong way to cut ice.

Elmer Twichell says he has no complaint against those railroads that are passing dividends except that they ought to blow the whistle and ring the bell first.

The Seabury committee reported investigating the stock market operations of Mayer Walker. This seems unjust. Anybody who had any stock market operations during the last few years has been punished enough.

CARDINALS BEAT PHILS TWICE TO INCREASE LEAD

NEED ONLY FIVE MORE VICTORIES TO CINCH TITLE

Hornsby Homer With Bases Full Gives Cubs Two Wins

By COPELAND C. BURG
INS Sports Writer

NEW YORK—Persons like Gabby Street, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, who he has been tossing on pillows and counting sheep, at least stopped counting today.

For, while the New York Giants were being generous with the down under Cincy Reds, the Cardinals chased the Phils twice and are nine games out in front in the national league's so-called pennant chase. The Redbirds need only five victories in their remaining thirteen games to clinch the title.

Derringer allowed only six hits in the 6-2 opener, but the Phils broke his scoreless inning record at 33 frames. Hallahan was pushed to a triumph, 7 to 2, in the finale, when Watson drove in four runs with two homers.

Reds Blank Giants
Larry Brown started the Giants with five new and then blows and Durocher squeezed in Cuccinello from third in the ninth to snatch 16 for the Reds, 1 to 0. Five hits was all Cincinnati could garner off Pitzimmons in the night chapeau; the Giants winning, 9 to 4.

One-hit hurling by Guy Bush furnished the Chicago Cubs an 8 to 1 advantage over Boston, after Manager Roger Hornsby went in to pinch hit in the fifth inning and did nothing else but crack a solid homer in the eleventh inning with the bases bogged. The finale score was 11 to 7 in the Cubs' favor.

Fred Helmeck wasn't exactly hot as a pitcher but he recorded two putouts and eight assists to aid the Brooklyn Robins in their 6-5 flop of Pittsburgh. Wright's double scored the tying and winning runs.

Yanks Win Two
Tony Lazzeri won the ball game for the Yankees over the 6-5 flop of Pittsburgh. Wright's double scored the tying and winning runs. In the second tilt, Lou Gehrig hit home runs, 4 to 3, in the ninth inning.

General Crowder limited the Cleveland Indians to six hits and paced three runners to a 7 to 1 Washington marked up a 7 to 1 victory.

The 7:30 Sunday closing law in Boston shut down the second Boston-Brooklyn game. The Sox, contest with the score tied at two runs each in the fourth inning.

Caraway saved the hose in the final inning after the bases were filled. In the opener, Blue captained a Sox hitting attack that lowered the Bostonians, 6 to 5.

CHICAGO—(INS)—Jim Londoos, claimant to the world's wrestling championship, today set $250,000 as the price of his services in a proposed match with Ed "Strangler" Lewis. In the statement issued through his manager Londoos declared it was worth $250,000 to assume the risk of grappling with the Strangler. The statement was a reply to Lewis' recent challenge.

Most swimmers use their feet far more than their hands and arms in breaking records, but not so with Charles (Zimmy) Zibelman. He uses only his arms, for he is legless. Yet this did not stop Zimmy when he recently set out to break the world's endurance swimming mark in the War Memorial Pool at Honolulu. Despite his lack of lower extremities for pushers, this unique aquatic star swam continuously one hundred hours and fifteen seconds.

William MacCorkell is an old timothy. Though 86 years of age, he finds that being idle is too much work, hence the tin can chair. In making the unique chair, MacCorkell used 173 tomato, corn, bean, salmon, soup, and milk cans, soldered together. He claims that the chair not only is odd, but has sitting qualities seldom, if ever, to be found in ordinary furniture. It took him 50 hours on and off to gather enough cans and complete the job.

GREENTREE COLT TO HAVE CHANCE FOR NEW HONORS

Twenty Grand 1 to 15 Favorite to Take Gold Cup Race

BY LES CONKLIN
INS Sports Writer

NEW YORK—Twenty Grand the most popular thoroughbred of the year despite his two defeats by Mate, will be presented with a further opportunity to add to his laurels in the running of the Jockey club gold cup race at Belmont park next Saturday.

At this stage of Twenty Grand's career, the record of the big Red Train from the Greentree stable invites comparison with that of Man O' War, Samuel Riddle's super-horse that held the turf spotlight eleven years ago.

By winning the $25,000 Lawrence reaction last Saturday, the big bay son of St. Germans and Bonus increased his total earnings in two seasons of racing to $249,525. He is now eighth on the list of leading American money-winning horses and his winnings exceed those of Man O' War.

Almost Equals Record
The Greentree star won Saturday's race in a common canter. If he had been pressed, Twenty Grand would have shattered the record time of 2:40 4-5 set by Man O' War in winning the mile and five furlongs classic in 1920. As it was, he came within two fifths of a second of the time made by his famous predecessor.

"The Grand" covered the first mile and a half of the journey in 2:26. That was four-fifths of a second better than the time made by Man O' War in winning the Jockey club gold cup in 1920, when the distance was a mile and a half.

In 1921, the year after Man O' War won the gold cup, the distance was changed from a mile and a half to two miles. The time of 3:22 2-5 set by Hatter in capturing the stake that year never has been bettered by subsequent winners of the gold cup, but should be beaten by Twenty Grand next Saturday.

Greentree Ace Favorite
The Greentree star likely will be 1 to 15 in the betting, the same odds quoted on him in the realization of his Saturday victory. It was regarded as "probable" yet it is interesting to recall that Man O' War, who also raced in the realization and gold cup on successive Saturdays eleven years ago, was held at 1 to 100 in both events.

In other words, Twenty-Grand's legion of admirers may compare him with Man O' War in their enthusiastic moments, but they don't back him off the boards the way the Riddle Racer was.

Man, who twice conquered Twenty Grand this year, is eligible for the gold cup on Saturday but is a doubtful starter. He is being prepped for campaigns in Maryland and Florida.

Sun Beau May Enter
Sun Beau, greatest money winner of all time, may go to the post against Twenty Grand on Saturday and thus get an opportunity to obtain revenge for the beating given him by the Greentree crack in the Saratoga cup. Sun Beau had been hard raced before that meeting.

Man, who twice conquered Twenty Grand this year, is eligible for the gold cup on Saturday but is a doubtful starter. He is being prepped for campaigns in Maryland and Florida.

Whether Twenty Grand wins or not on Saturday, his position as leading money-winner of 1931 seems secure. He already has contributed $208,145 to Mrs. Payne Whitney's vaults this season.

Green Bay Defeats Cleveland, 26 to 0

GREEN BAY, Wis.—(INS)—The 1931 professional football season had been launched here today following a smashing 26 to 0 victory scored by the Green Bay Packers over the Cleveland eleven.

The Ohioans were outclassed at every stage of the game. Only twice did they succeed in working the ball within the Packers' 30-yard line. Baker, McRary, Wilson and Saunders shared touchdown honors for the victors.

Despite the fact that he has several times in the past two weeks said that he wouldn't look at a tennis ball for a month after the Nationals, Vines intends competing in the Pacific southwest championships which open next Friday in Los Angeles.

Eddie Casey Predicts Notre Dame Will Miss Knute Rockne

Harvard Coach Thinks Army Best in East This Season

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the first of a series of football articles by Eddie Casey, former All-American, former coach and now head coach at Harvard. The article will appear Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays throughout the football season.

BOSTON—King football, already having drawn most of the colleges to his great fall court, will find the western conference eleven and the eastern conference eleven, Princeton, Yale and Harvard, joining the big parade tomorrow in practice.

To predict that this will be football's greatest season would be to resurrect the pet expression which has heralded most of the nation's gridiron campaigns for the last 30 years. Certainly this should be one of the most interesting of football seasons.

From a crowd standpoint, it comes to the second year of a serious business depression. From the same standpoint, there will be new faces to be seen, new names to speed across the country by radio and telegraph, new and old rivalries to provide outstanding touches and new coaches to be tested. From a purely sentimental standpoint, it will be interesting if for no other reason than that it is the first season in a decade when that great man and his assistant, Knute Rockne, will not be with us.

Wherever I have talked with football men since his tragic death last spring, discussion of the game invariably has turned upon Rockne, and the effect his passing will have on Notre Dame football. Perhaps I overestimate a man whom I always have considered a genius, but to my mind Notre Dame no longer can expect to have such exceptional teams and an exceptional coach can tackle the schedules and make the grade and win the games that Rockne teams won.

Knute Rockne Missing
Notre Dame would have good seasons, but I will be most surprised if the approach the greatness achieved by their predecessors. E. Crybder, of course, recognizes Rockne was a great coach and acknowledges that he left a Notre Dame system. His assistant will carry on are fine football men, but the difference between "good" Notre Dame and exceptional Notre Dame teams has been removed when you subtract the magnetic personality of Rockne. The finishing touches which polish good teams into great teams are provided through a coach's personality.

Potentially the strongest team in the east this season is a Notre Dame rival of long standing, none other than Army. It has been my conviction, and other coaches have agreed, that Army's paper prospects are better than at any time in recent years. Maj. Ralph Sasse has a great many veterans, and he had a great plebe team last year from which to draw when practice started at the point.

Other Sopps Strong
Army's plebe team is not the only first-year crop that carries the secret hopes of a varsity coach. Mac Stevens down at Yale, and Jack Cannell at Dartmouth, hope for great things from their sophomores. Stevens considers that the Yale freshman group of a year ago was one of the best freshman teams Yale ever has had, and I believe that as the season progresses you will find sophomores playing a heavy role in the game at New Haven.

Yale undoubtedly will present a new type of attack this fall. The addition of Benny Friedman, the former Michigan star, and Bucky O'Connor, the Notre Dame back, to the coaching staff gives Stevens men who can aid him in developing his running attack and passing game. There is a general idea that

COLLEGE BOXING RECEIVES A BLOW EVE OF OLYMPICS

Resignation of Navy From Association Mars Plans

Elaborate plans had been laid by college boxing authorities to make the coming season the biggest yet and to attempt to land several college leather pushers on the American Olympic team next summer in Los Angeles.

These plans have been somewhat marred by the resignation of Navy from the Intercollegiate Boxing Association.

Navy's action comes after many months of deliberation and it is not likely that there will be any giving in. Navy quit after a quarrel with Penn State, another old member of the association. That quarrel was at its height during last winter's championships and it was then announced that the Lions and Middlelies would not meet again this year.

Navy protested the selection of officials by Dr. Francis Grant and demanded he be dismissed as executive secretary. The association turned down this demand. In fact no other member supported Navy's demand.

As about the same time West Point was proposed for membership which was not to the liking of the Navy for the row between Navy and Army over the eligibility code had gone on for many years.

Navy will continue in boxing and will go through a schedule which includes several teams not members of the association.

TOUCHDOWN SECRETS

Rock Used Delayed Straight Drive

Dispatched from Hanover last week indicated that Jack Cannell was most gloomy over the Green's prospects. He has intact the undefeated freshman team of a year ago, but that is untested material. Undoubtedly Dartmouth has the best backfield talent that has graced a green squad in years, but line prospects are most indefinite. The rushing situation, however, has not been improved by a bothersome injury suffered by Captain Stan Yulick against Harvard a year ago.

Probably the most interesting team to watch will be Pennsylvania. A new coaching staff is in charge, and Penn means to go about the raising of its football house from a stout foundation of understanding between coaches and players. Navy probably will be much the same under Rip Miller, though it is expected to go completely Notre Dame with Christy Flanagan working with the old Notre Dame star.

Columbia Squad Small
Lou Little isn't by any means out of the woods at Columbia. He has been progressing wonderfully, the way his fellow football coaches expected. Certainly Little, a fine drillmaster, will get everything out of Columbia that any coach could, but he is handicapped by a small squad. If Columbia does go, the hero of the action probably will be that good halfback, Ralph Hewitt.

Wednesday's article will deal with the play of a particular position on a football team, and the reader might watch with enjoyment. In Friday's article he will return to a discussion of team prospects.

Atlas Special Team Loses Three Games To Opponents Here

Following a season of numerous victories, the Atlas Special kiltball team played three contests Sunday and lost all of them. The Wapello kiltball team downed them in the morning at Jefferson field 7 to 1. Schmidt's Eagles won in the afternoon at Weed park, 7 to 6, and Honts Transfer team won at the park diamond, 8 to 5.

The three defeats were the third, fourth and fifth of the season. They have won 20 games.

Following their win over the Atlas team, Schmidt's Eagles added another victim to its string at the Weed park diamond by downing the New Era aggregation, 11 to 3. The Eagles dropped a close contest to the McKee factory team in the morning 9 to 8.

MUSKIES DOWN MECCAS, 11-3

City Baseball Title Belongs to Victors Through Win

Bunching nine hits in the first four innings, the Muscatine Muskies chalked up a clean cut victory over the Muscatine Meccas at Weed park Sunday afternoon, 11 to 3. The victory gave the Muskies the city baseball championship as it was the second in as many weeks over their city rivals.

Lefty Heidelberg on the mound for the winners pitched for but the entire distance, allowing but six hits with five of these coming in the first three innings. Bob Gauthier pitched fair ball for the Meccas after getting away to a wobbly start but the early lead the Muskies piled up was too much for his mates to overcome.

Bill Krueger and Buck McIntyre of the winners pounded out home runs, both of them traveling deep into left field. Four doubles were hit during the contest, one each by McIntyre, Jacobs, Krueger and Mahraun. Krueger led both teams in hitting with three base blows in as many trips to the plate. Box score:

Medical Intolerance The Allopaths Exposed

Leaders in every modern line of human endeavor, in religion, in statesmanship, in business, in the arts and sciences, are the men and women who are governed by the spirit of tolerance and reasonableness in their relationship with their associates, their competitors and the public in general. The appeal to bigotry, narrow-mindedness and bygone prejudices has been relegated to the small fry of circumscribed intelligence.

This attitude, however, is not true with the orthodox or "regular" of the medical profession. Allopathic medicine is the kind of medicine which would be forced upon the public by every conceivable means and methods, even by laws and health board rulings which have the same effect as law in most instances. All physicians of schools other than the Allopathic are called "quacks." By branding all individuals as quacks, faddists, fakery and impostors who do not subscribe to their narrow views of what constitutes the practice of healing, many of the "regulars" display an inflated ego which attitude, however, is not taken by all of these in the "regular" medical profession. Those in the profession who do make an effort to crush all opponents to their own gigantic program of greed and power, are becoming a boomerang which will surely recoil with double vigor upon their own heads, for their incessant cries of what they consider the proper definition of the term "quack" is making them the laughing stock of the nation, their selfish motives being transparent.

A crisis in therapy is apparent. Not only are there undercurrents discernible among the physicians, but a large percentage of the laity is being alienated in increasing numbers and turning away from the licensed regular practitioners due to their present day methods.

Disgraceful efforts are made with varying degrees of success to prohibit the use of the radio for any form of health talks except for themselves. Printed circulars are posted in public places in the street cars and elevated trains of the large cities, and news items appear which are in reality advertisements of an insidious nature, all of which is intended to promote the practice of the family doctor who is supposed to be a "regular." Extravagant claims are made for the prevention of disease, and children are promised immunity from communicable diseases by inoculation with serum and vaccine. Statements such as are made cannot help but arouse antagonism and disgust in every well informed person; their prompt reaction is that health authorities who sponsor such falsehoods are not to be trusted in any way—it is simply ridiculous to believe some of the advertisements and some of the exaggerated news items intended to send the people to the "family doctor." If the medical men honestly paid for their publicity themselves, it would not be quite so bad, they dip their hands into the public purse provided by the taxpayers to carry on these campaigns of slander, persecution of all "irregulars" in an intolerant campaign to promote the interests of the orthodox or Allopathic doctors.

Then on top of all the advertising done by the Medics they attempt to force preventive medicine on the public by means of medical legislation so that they may govern the situation in the field of healing, and the medical examiners, who are all "regulars" consider themselves self-appointed guardians of an indulgent public, and their attitude is that they protect the people from a serious menace—that of all competitors.

At present there is an industrial rivalry which has nothing in common with the health of the public. The regulars are doing all possible to promote business, particularly to promote preventive medicine and all the dangerous serums and vaccines which go with it.

All great medical discoveries are being made by those outside the medical profession—laymen or at most obscure physicians—seldom are discoveries made in the laboratory which are lasting and will stand the test of time.

The trend in modern medicine is changing and the vision of science is broadening more and more so that many who were reputed ten years ago as men who knew, might today be ranked as illiterate and incompetent. The tendency, too, is toward newer and better methods—and particularly, safer methods than those which end in disaster—such as frequently results with deadly serums and vaccines. The physicians from more recent and newer school of healing are becoming more popular because there is not the danger from natural methods as from so-called preventive medicine. And there is an ever-growing number of fair minded people who do not agree with the medical profession (regular) when its members call the physicians of newer and safer methods "quacks."

The people also are awakening to the rampant commercialism in medical practice, the craze for vaccines and serums forced upon well people, the herding of children into the operating room for removal of tonsils recommended by the school doctor, the hundreds of unnecessary operations, which often leave the patient far worse than before, all these and many more gross evils must be remedied before the public will have confidence in the "regulars." As long as they insist upon forcing preventive medicine on the people with all the dangers incident to inoculation so long will the public continue to seek other physicians even though the others are not recognized or licensed to the extent of the Allopaths. The public is changing in its attitude toward medicine.

WILL INSPECT PROPOSED ROAD

Engineer for State Board to Visit Wild Cat Den

Early action by the state board of conservation with regard to the establishment of the proposed new road through Wild Cat Den state park was looked for today following receipt of word by County Engineer E. P. G. Halbfass from M. L. Hutton, engineer for the state board, that he would arrive here within a few days to inspect the location.

After the abandonment some time ago by the state of a new road through the park, land owners of the vicinity petitioned for the establishment of another road, outside the park, offering to deed land necessary for the improvement in return for slight concessions from the state.

County Engineer Halbfass was instructed at that time to prepare a plat of the proposed new road, which he completed and submitted to the state park board members. The state engineer will look over the proposed location as outlined in the plat, and make his report back to the board.

Foulis and Circelli Show Way to Vets With 71 and 72

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—(INS)—A slender, blonde, youngster of 21 years, answering to the name of James Foulis, of the Ruth Lake Country club in Chicago, recorded a 71 in the qualifying round of the Professional Golfers' association championship here today to lead the procession. Foulis went out in 35, and came back in 36 with a six at the fourteenth hole where he landed in the pond. He comes by his golf ability naturally, as his dad, old Jim Foulis, is one of the deans of Chicago golf.

Another comparatively unknown, contestant, Pat Circelli, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., was right up in front with a 72, and that was a stroke better than Gene Sarazen, of Great Neck, L. I., and Joe Kirkwood, the trick shot artist from Philadelphia, Gene carelessly tapped at his ball on the eighteenth green when it was dead to the pin, but did not hit it and took a six to come home in 40.

Horton Smith, of Joplin, Mo., and Wild Bill Melhorn, of New York, both of whom so far as clubs are concerned, finished with 74.

COMPETITIVE ADVANTAGE

Most successes are not sudden. But part of their fascination is the effect of suddenness. It is more fun to regard success as something that happened overnight. We dislike to lose our faith in miracles.

Business growth in Muscatine has not been characterized by any miracles. It has sprung from those businesses soundly established years ago, and which today reflect the ripening of an economic process that has never been lacking in business ethics and concurrent organizations.

We take exuberant pride in the business growth of the Muscatine institutions. Behind the orderliness of their expansion is ordered thinking. Joined with their dollar surplus is the confidence surplus. In the place of customers they possess selling relationships, matured loyalties that bind business friends together. These matured relationships are the headquarters of stability. As they sell so do they buy—on the basis of buying relationship.

Here on this page we see the printed word delegated to negotiate friendships and to the building of a distinct competitive advantage. The merchants whose names appear on this page are a part of Muscatine's growing scheme of nature. To be at your service is their aim; to be able to help you with your needs is their desire. Our recognition of their efforts can best be displayed by giving them our patronage.
